

ALL-METRO

SPECIALIST SHOWCASE SERIES

We are excited to introduce to you the All-Metro Specialist Showcase Series, a 501(c)3 organization providing a platform for area high school kickers, punters and long snappers to be recognized locally and nationally by showcasing their skills through competition. Unlike many other FOR-PROFIT organizations running showcases solely for their own monetary gains, All-Metro's NON-PROFIT status allows us to take a different approach towards helping athletes achieve their collegiate goals. Utilizing an algorithm developed over the past 10 years, we are able to identify the true ability of each athlete based on performance, versus ranking them based on how much they have spent participating in specific events run by FOR-PROFIT organizations.

All-Metro Specialists Showcase Series was created by Neil Rackers, an 11-year NFL veteran and 2005 All-Pro Kicker, David Brader, a former NFL punter (Jacksonville '05) and Dan Kessler, a collegiate long snapper. The purpose of All-Metro is to provide multiple FREE opportunities for high school athletes to create a catalog of performances to validate their status as a specialist in the recruiting process for college coaches. In an attempt to further the career of each athlete, All-Metro is dedicated to showcasing the talents of the individual athlete in order to gain recognition based on consistent performances instead of the number of camps an athlete can afford to attend.

All-Metro recognizes that kickers, punters and long snappers are the least valued and unrecognized positions in football until you need them. We hope to increase opportunities for these athletes through the financial contributions of donors like yourself.

Costs for each event include field rental, insurance, equipment, staff (6-8 per event), photographer, videographer, data entry and advertisements. These costs run between $1,500-$2,500 per event. At no cost to the athletes for local ratings, All-Metro needs to raise more than $20,000 annually to provide these opportunities; we are counting on your generosity to continue our mission. Donations to this program can provide added marketing benefits for your company.
